

Salt Lake Modern presents Taylor Woolley

Digital Image © 2001 Utah State Historical Society. All rights reserved.

Salt Lake Modern is pleased to feature Taylor Woolley, one of Utah's first modernists. In Utah, Taylor Woolley is foremost known as the architect who introduced the Prairie School style in 1911. Outside the state, Woolley is known as Frank Lloyd Wright's trusted draftsman and a prominent figure in the popular book "Loving Frank." Professor Peter Goss, architectural historian and photographer, will speak briefly about Woolley's career as an architect and impact on Utah.

Date: Saturday, October 8

Time: 10:00 a.m. - Noon

Place: 1408 E. Yale Avenue, Salt Lake City

Cost: $10 suggested donation or free for all Utah Heritage Foundation members. Click here to join or renew.

Light breakfast included.

RSVP to rsvp@slmodern.org by October 5.

Sponsored by Mony Ty - Mid-Century Modern Realtor, Lloyd Architects, Evergreene

Sugar House

Construction, The Green Ant, Utah Heritage Foundation, and Held in association with DOCOMOMO-US National Modernism Tour Day. Read more about this national event here.

Download the official invitation for Taylor Woolley.

Preserving, protecting and promoting Utah's historic built environment.